How long does it take for steam cleaned carpet to dry

Hot water extraction (steam cleaning) is one of the most effective ways to clean carpets. It relies on pressurized water heated to extreme temperatures to rinse cleaning agents out of the carpet. After the cleaning process is complete, the carpet typically takes 6 to 12 hours to dry. But wet carpet will take longer to dry in rooms with poor circulation, cold air, or high levels of humidity. How Long Until Can I Walk Across The Carpet? You should wait until the carpet is fully dry before walking across it. If you need to get to the sooner, be sure to remove your shoes and stick to the edges of the carpet. Damp carpet is like a magnet for stains. So walking across it before it fully dries can leave a trail of dirt and compressed pile, bringing it back to the condition it was in pre-cleaning. How to Dry Carpet Fast After Cleaning There are a number of ways to decrease a carpet's drying time to give your family free reign of the house once again. Most of the tricks involve increasing the circulation of air in the room. Fans Try turning on the ceiling fan in the room with your carpet to help dry it out faster. If your room doesn't have a ceiling fan, any fan will do. High powered oscillating fans are especially useful. Open Windows Opening the windows is another way to get the air moving. However, doing so when it's cold or humid outside will be counterproductive. But on hot, dry days, an open window can go a long way toward drying your carpets faster. Dehumidifiers It might seem obvious, but turning on a dehumidifier is one of the best ways to speed up the carpet drying process. They sap moisture from the room and collect it in a storage tank or direct it toward a drain. If you're using the storage tank, be sure to check back every few hours to empty it. You'll be surprised by the amount of water it collects in a room with freshly cleaned carpets. Air Conditioning While it might seem counterintuitive, turning on the air conditioner can actually speed up the drying process. Although they lower the temperature in the room, they also remove moisture from the air. A dehumidifier will be more effective, but an air conditioner can get the job done. Clean More Often The dirtier a carpet is, the more water it takes to clean. When they're especially dirty, it can take 24 hours or more to dry a carpet after cleaning. You don't need to hire a professional carpet cleaner every week by any means. But regular vacuuming and seasonal cleanings will make your carpets dry much faster. The steam carpet cleaning method is considered the most beneficial and safe cleaning method of all, but one of the cons of this method is the longer time for drying. So let's see how long it takes for the carpet to dry before you can use it again when the steam cleaning is applied. How does the carpet cleaning work? The principle of this cleaning method is basic. The steam carpet cleaning uses a heated water that produces steam, which killed all the microbes, harmful bacteria and loses the dirt and grime. All of this together is then vacuumed without leaving any residue. How long the carpet dries? So, steam cleaning uses a fair amount of water. Although the professional heavy-duty machines used for vacuuming the water are very strong, the procedure leaves the carpet relatively damp and it takes from about 6 up to 12 hours for the carpet to completely dry. Of course, this time period would be longer during the wet weather and can be shorten during the hot summer days. Another way to shorten the process of drying is by opening some of the windows or even turn on the ceiling fan to provide airflow. The so-called dry cleaning requires much shorter time for drying but the use of chemicals most of which cause health issues is not what the modern people prefer. They would rather wait longer before using the carpet than to put their own health at risk. What depends on the experience of the professional cleaner? One more thing that can shorten or prolong the time for carpet's drying is the experience of the cleaner. He should be well-trained and experienced in order to provide a precise and fast work. He should also know what quantity of water is required to clean the carpet without soaking it wet. Additionally, he needs to dedicate enough time for vacuuming and leave the carpet relatively dry. Mvir Cleaning company that serves the entire London and vicinity has dedicated and trained cleaning professionals who know all the specifics of efficient steam carpet cleaning. Moreover, they offer a warranty for full customer satisfaction, which means that they will work for free to re-do the results if the customer is not 100% satisfied. Living in the areas with high humidity The humidity is another factor that prevents the carpets from quick drying and unfortunately it is beyond the control of professional cleaners. Since the carpets dry by evaporation, the air should be dryer than the carpet in order to let the moisture in the fibres to go out. If the surrounding air is too humid, it will not be able to absorb the moisture and the period for carpet drying prolongs. If you live in such a humid region, you can accelerate the process of drying by opening the windows in the premise to let the dryer air to enter and flow around. So the exact time for carpet drying after steam carpet cleaning depends on many factors, but the average time is between 6 and 12 hours. Photo Courtesy: Pixabay Most people associate steam cleaners with carpet, but these machines can be used for so much more. Steam cleaners are used for sanitizing surfaces such as glass shower doors, tile walls, cleaning hardwood, and tile flooring and getting your living room drapes clean. Ranging in size from backpack and handheld units to large stand-up push machines, steam cleaning can be as simple as a daily mop of a kitchen floor to deep cleaning of household surfaces. More commonly known as hot water extraction, it's the only method that penetrates right down into the carpet fibres removing any unwanted debris and bacteria. The issue is that because it requires the use of water carpets are likely to remain damp for a considerable time after. While you may simply consider a damp carpet to be nothing more than an inconvenience, the fact is that the longer a carpet remains damp the more it can impact on your health. With this in mind, let's take a closer look at why carpets need to be dried quickly and why this is important. The 24 hour rule If a carpet remains damp beyond 24 hours it's possible that the damp fibres can start to attract microbial growth. This in turn creates mould and mildew which can soon spread to other parts of the house. In addition as you're probably aware mould spores can also be carried in the air and can easily be breathed in. While not overly dangerous for healthy adults it can impact on the health of children, the elderly, and those with existing conditions such as asthma and other chest problems. Not only this, when a wet carpet is walked upon it compresses the fibres contributing to wear and tear which ultimately decreases it's life expectancy. Now you know this... how do you get your carpet dry within the 24 hour window? It all depends upon how much water has gone into your carpet and the climate you live in. The first point can easily be addressed by hiring an experienced contractor. They should have the relevant equipment that delivers the exact amount of water that will eradicate deep down bacteria, but won't overly soak your carpet. The second point however is more difficult. Regions with more humidity means that carpet drying times will take longer. For this reason you may need some added help in the form of dehumidifiers, air movers, and fans to get your carpet dry fast. Stationary moisture in the air can stagnate slowing up the drying process. This is why air movers are vital to keep the supply of air flowing, while fans dry the carpet itself. Alternatively, if you reside in an arid dry climate, you might only need to open all the doors and windows and let the air circulate naturally. Using either/or of these methods properly should allow a carpet to be fully dry within 12 hours and for most carpets, this is an agreeable drying period.
